

Faribault Affiliate Communiqué

AAUW Mission: To advance gender equity for women and girls through research, education, and advocacy.

January 2026 President's Message

Your strength is shared when you are present for others.

Did you set an intention for 2026? Did you make a resolution for 2026? Is it still your focus or have you started to backslide or forget what it was and how you were going to implement it? Was it for your self — was it for others? Whatever direction you did or did not take, I'd like to remind you of AAUW's mission.

Education

AAUW has a mission to advance equity for women and girls grounded in the belief that economic empowerment is essential to gender equity - and higher education is a critical pathway to achieving it.

Higher Education supports economic security and upward mobility, helping women thrive personally and professionally. When women have equitable access to education, families, communities, and economics are stronger.

AAUW's work centers on ensuring higher education is inclusive, diverse, and free from harassment and discrimination, so women and girls can fully realize their potential.

Education is one of the strongest drivers of gender equity. What can you do?

Your strength is shared when you are present for others.

We have a busy and interesting year ahead for our local branch starting in January with our member, Sue Stout, speaking about Ruth's House. Our luncheon committee is at work planning for April 18th, book club continues to meet monthly to discuss member's book choices, and members visit and socialize monthly on a Saturday at Janna's

Your strength is shared when you are present for others.

Be politically involved at the grassroots level!

February 3rd is the date for the Minnesota political caucus.

You will meet with like-minded neighbors who support a political party to discuss political concerns, work on local organization and select candidates.

After January 15th, you can search FIND MY CAUCUS. That will take you to the MN Secretary of State site. By supplying your address, you can find your caucus location.

Remembering

Glenda Martin, 91, died peacefully at home in St. Paul on Dec. 19. In her long and Rich life, Glenda was a visionary and a trailblazer Whose work inspired many. At heart, she was always a teacher, whether in her long career as an educator Or, later, as publisher, bookseller, book-group leader, writer.

In education, Glenda's students ranged from public-School 5th graders to U. Of M. graduate students.

She was a leader in Minnesota and nationally in supporting blind and vision-impaired students in The mainstream.

In 1985, she and Mollie Hoben created the Minnesota Women's Press, a feminist newspaper (now magazine) that continues today. Over the years, Glenda created And facilitated 100s of book groups—all dedicated to reading books by women—And in 1996, she and Mollie created the magazine BookWomen, also still publishing.

She will be deeply missed by daughter Corinne Martin White; son Douglas Martin; Beloved friend Mollie Hoben; son-in-law Thomas White; daughter-in-law Julie Martin; grandchildren Avery White, Campbell White, Kate Martin, and Ryan Martin. She was preceded in death by husband Richard, in 2001, and son Jeffrey, in 1986.

Family and friends will celebrate the life and legacy of this remarkable woman Jan. 17 at 2:00 p.m. at the St. Anthony Park branch library, 2345 Como Ave., St. Paul. Friends may honor Glenda's memory by reading books by women and supporting local libraries and independent booksellers. Memorial donations suggested to Minnesota Women's Press.

(Members of our Faribault Affiliate will never forget the wonderful programs on books by women authors that Glenda and Molly presented in Faribault. We marveled at Glenda's ability to effortlessly produce the titles, authors, and plots of so many books in a short meeting time.)

Anticipation!

We had a little trouble with the rules of the game. Barb's and Betty's reactions say it all!!

It's Diane's turn to swap and she's putting a lot of thought into her decision.
